Methodology:

Data were collected between October 19 and 30, 2003 by JMCK Polling (A division of JMCK Communications Inc.). JMCK Polling is headquartered in Calgary, Alberta.

A total of 1,018 adult Canadians were interviewed by telephone. Where necessary, the sample has been statistically weighted to more accurately represent the demographic distribution of the Canadian population. The margin of error is ± 3.1 percent, 19 times out of 20. The margin of error increases when analyzing sub-samples of the total.

Q1 - Federal Gun Registry: Question

Q1. As you may know, there has been an ongoing controversy associated with the federal government's firearm registry ever since the federal Auditor General released a report last December saying that the registry is badly managed and has gone over budget by about one billion dollars. Since that time, eight provinces and three territories have called for the gun registry to either be suspended or scrapped altogether and six provinces have advised the federal government that they will not prosecute federal Firearms Act offences. The registry was designed to give Canada's security officials basic information about the firearms that we own. Some people say that the major cost over-runs show that the gun registry is badly organized, isn't working properly, and should be scrapped. Other people say that even though the registry has had management problems and has gone over budget, it will save lives and should be continued. Which statement is closest to your point of view?

- Gun registry is badly organized and should be scrapped
- Gun registry will save lives and should be continued
- Undecided
